Equities paused for breath in May after the rally in April. Against this background the Crux European Fund gained 0.5% compared to its IA peer group which fell 2.2%. The fund outperformed due to its exposure to technology stocks that gained with general AI animal spirits such as semiconductor equipment-makers VAT and ASML, as well as chipmakers STMicro and Infineon. Nordic Transport soared 21% on strong earnings. Siemens rose after reporting robust results on continuing demand for electrification and peers Schneider and Hexagon rose in sympathy. Performance was held back by the fund's bank exposures which slid with the sector such as Nordea, and Puma and Adidas slipped with continued weak Chinese consumer sentiment. In terms of transactions, we disposed of Majorel having been bid for in April and another higher bid appears unlikely and topped up Azelis as their raised fresh capital to fund future acquisitions.
