November was a strong month for equities globally when, early in the month the market perceived an easing in the extent of US interest rate rises required to tame inflation during the course of 2023. Reports suggest that many investors have historically low levels of investment in equities and therefore any positive news is likely to be greeted with sharp movements up, as was the case. The TM CRUX UK Special Situations Fund, which has a cyclical and small cap bias had a good month returning 8.9%. Cyclical holdings such as Glencore, One Savings Bank, Inchcape, Melrose and Grafton all posted double digit returns and there were returns of over 20% from Hill and Smith, Watches Of Switzerland and JD Sports. The best performer of all was small cap holding Wandisco which rose 48% on improved trading prospects for 2023 and beyond. In China there was news of partial easings of lockdowns which was positive for the holdings in Prudential and Standard Chartered which have an Asian focus. We are starting to see more interest in cyclical and smaller company players from strategists and institutions alike. These conditions should be very positive for the fund. Although the worst of economic news is yet to come, much of the bad news is already reflected in the shares of domestic companies and whilst we cannot predict timing of any recovery better than anyone else we are generally optimistic for the outlook in 2023 and beyond.
